A voice for business in uncertain times

Richard Wong leads the Greater Parkland
Regional Chamber of Commerce

Richard Wong, chair of the GPRC and associate lawyer at McLennan Ross LLP.

By Shayna Wiwierski

In the sprawling Greater Parkland region northwest of Edmonton, Richard Wong is working to forge connections and foster resilience.

As the chair of the Greater Parkland Regional Chamber of Commerce (GPRC) and an associate lawyer at McLennan Ross LLP, Wong brings a blend of legal acumen and community-minded leadership to a role that has grown increasingly vital amid shifting economic tides.

Wong, who has served on the GPRC board since 2021, represents McLennan Ross, a full-service law firm with offices in Calgary, Edmonton, and Yellowknife. The firm, a chamber member since 2019, practices in nearly all key areas of law, from labour and employment to commercial litigation and corporate commercial. Wong's own focus lies in commercial litigation, with an emphasis on construction disputes, alongside a growing immigration practice. It's a portfolio that reflects the diverse needs of the region's businesses, which McLennan Ross serves not only locally, but across Canada.

For Wong, the chamber is more than a networking hub—it's a lifeline for businesses navigating a post-pandemic world.

"Being a member of the GPRC provides opportunities to connect with both our clients, which include chamber members and other business owners," says Wong. "It allows me to represent a broader community outside the Edmonton hub and into the Greater Parkland region, in my own backyard, while also addressing the needs of our members and stakeholders."

That reach is critical for a regional firm like McLennan Ross, which prides itself on meeting clients where they are, whether in bustling urban centres or quieter rural outposts. The challenges facing Parkland businesses are multifaceted, Wong notes, shaped by forces both global and local.

"In particular, since the pandemic, businesses in all industries are finding different ways to adapt to changes in regulations or government policies," he says.

The uncertainty of pandemic-era rules has given way to new anxieties—proposed tariffs, labour shortages, and difficulties filling both skilled and entry-level positions. For some employers, finding Canadian citizens or permanent residents to fill critical roles has proven elusive, a gap Wong's immigration work seeks to address.

Under Wong's leadership as chair, and through the leadership and momentum of the past chairs, staff, and other chamber volunteers who he gives credit to, the Chamber has sharpened its mission to support its members through these headwinds.

"We've already started to see an enhancement of our services and our visibility in the community and in a region which continues to grow and prosper," he says.

The chamber's offerings—networking events, business development support and education, marketing and advertising, community engagement, and advocacy—fill a unique niche, uniting businesses of all sizes in a way few other organizations can. Upcoming flagship events will celebrate the region's entrepreneurial successes and business opportunities, while fostering collaboration and relationship-building.

Wong sees the chamber as a catalyst for a stronger, more cohesive region. As businesses grapple with labour woes and policy shifts, the chamber stands ready to amplify their services—and, in doing so, to shape the future of a region poised for growth. It's a vision rooted in pragmatism: in an era of economic flux, collective action and mutual support are not just ideals but necessities.

"The GPRC provides an opportunity for local businesses to come together and build a stronger community and region," says Wong. "We're here to facilitate the growth, partnering with our members and municipalities in helping shape our region's future."

A message from the MLA for Spruce Grove-Stony Plain

The Honourable

SEARLE TURTON

As a longtime resident in Spruce Grove and Stony Plain, I have always felt that small businesses are the lifeblood of Canada's economy, playing a crucial role in job creation, innovation, and community engagement. In regions like ours, supporting small businesses is essential for fostering economic growth and ensuring a vibrant local economy which ultimately benefits families in our area. Chamber members, through their collective efforts, significantly contribute to this development.

THE VITAL ROLE OF SMALL BUSINESSES IN CANADA

1. Job creation: Small businesses are a major source of employment in Canada. They represent 97.9 per cent of all businesses and employ over 8.4 million Canadians. By providing jobs, small businesses help reduce unemployment and support local economies.

2. Innovation and diversity: Small businesses are often at the forefront of innovation. They bring unique products and services to the market, driving competition and offering consumers a variety of choices. This innovation is crucial for economic dynamism and growth.

3. Community engagement: Small businesses are deeply embedded in their communities. They sponsor local events, support charities, and contribute to the social fabric of their neighbourhoods. This engagement fosters a sense of community and strengthens local ties.

4. Economic stability: Supporting small businesses helps maintain economic stability. Unlike large corporations, small businesses are less likely to relocate, ensuring that economic benefits remain within the region. This stability is vital for long-term economic health.

THE CONTRIBUTION OF CHAMBER MEMBERS IN PARKLAND COUNTY

Chamber members in Parkland County play a pivotal role in supporting small businesses and driving regional economic development. Here's how they contribute:

1. Networking opportunities: The Greater Parkland Chamber of Commerce provides a platform for small business owners to connect, collaborate, and share resources. These networking opportunities can lead to partnerships, mentorships, and business growth, fostering a supportive business environment.

2. Advocacy and representation: The chamber advocates for policies that benefit small businesses. They represent the interests of local businesses at various levels of government, ensuring that their voices are heard in legislative processes. This advocacy is crucial for creating a favourable business environment.

3. Educational resources: The chamber offers workshops, seminars, and training sessions to help small business owners develop essential skills. These educational resources cover topics such as marketing, financial management, and technology adoption, empowering businesses to operate more efficiently and effectively.

4. Economic development initiatives: Chamber members actively participate in economic development initiatives that attract investment and promote regional growth. They collaborate with local governments, educational institutions, and other organizations to create a vibrant economic landscape. These initiatives include infrastructure improvements, business incubators, and community development projects.

5. Promotion and visibility: The chamber helps small businesses gain visibility through various promotional activities. They organize events, publish directories, and leverage social media to highlight local businesses. Increased visibility can lead to higher customer engagement and sales.

CONCLUSION

As the MLA for Spruce Grove and Stony Plain, I have always felt that supporting small businesses is essential for a robust and resilient economy in Canada. These enterprises bring innovation, job creation, and community engagement to the forefront, enriching the local marketplace. In Parkland County, chamber members play a crucial role in this ecosystem by providing networking opportunities, advocating for favourable policies, offering educational resources, participating in economic development initiatives, and promoting local businesses.

By championing small businesses, chamber members contribute significantly to the economic development of Parkland County, Spruce Grove, and Stony Plain, ensuring sustainable growth and prosperity for all. It is through these collective efforts that communities can thrive and build a brighter future.

Canada needs to reevaluate its diplomacy – and not just with the Americans!

In today's interconnected global economy, businesses must recognize that diplomacy extends beyond traditional statecraft.

In the realm of international business, diplomacy serves as a cornerstone for success.

The late Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, during a 2011 address at the University of Toronto, aptly remarked, "Anyone who tells you that personal relationships don't matter in foreign affairs doesn't have a clue". This statement underscores the pivotal role that personal relationships and diplomatic engagement play in navigating the complexities of global commerce.

Diplomacy in business involves the strategic management of relationships with foreign governments, local communities, and various stakeholders. It encompasses effective communication, cultural sensitivity, and negotiation skills to foster mutual understanding and cooperation. By engaging in diplomatic practices, businesses can mitigate risks associated with political instability, regulatory challenges, and cultural misunderstandings, thereby creating a more favourable environment for operations and growth.

A historical example illustrating the power of diplomacy in business is the Canada-United States Free Trade Agreement (CUSFTA) of 1987. Prime Minister Mulroney's close relationship with U.S. President Ronald Reagan facilitated negotiations that led to the elimination of tariffs between the two countries, significantly boosting trade and economic growth. This agreement not only exemplifies the impact of personal relationships in foreign affairs, but also highlights how diplomatic efforts can lead to substantial economic benefits.

In today's interconnected global economy, businesses must recognize that diplomacy extends beyond traditional statecraft. Companies are increasingly acting as diplomatic entities, engaging with foreign governments, non-governmental organizations, and local communities to advance their interests. This approach, often referred to as business diplomacy, involves building and maintaining positive relationships to navigate the complexities of international markets. By adopting diplomatic strategies, businesses can enhance their reputation, facilitate market entry, and ensure long-term sustainability.

Moreover, diplomacy plays a critical role in conflict resolution within the business context. When disputes arise, whether with foreign partners, governments, or other stakeholders, a diplomatic approach emphasizing dialogue, negotiation, and compromise can lead to mutually beneficial solutions. This not only preserves business relationships, but also contributes to a stable operating environment.

The importance of diplomacy in international business cannot be overstated. As Prime Minister Mulroney's experience demonstrates, personal relationships and diplomatic engagement are vital components of successful foreign affairs and international commerce. Businesses that invest in diplomatic strategies position themselves to navigate the complexities of the global market effectively, fostering cooperation, mitigating risks, and achieving sustainable success.

Next steps. We all need to recognize diplomacy is what is needed – not threats.

Shop Local Initiative: Supporting our community, one purchase at a time

When you shop locally, you're not just purchasing products and services – you're investing in the growth, sustainability, and success of your community.

The Shop Local Initiative is about empowering our community by inspiring residents to support the local businesses that make our neighbourhoods thrive. When you shop locally, you're not just purchasing products and services—you're investing in the growth, sustainability, and success of your community.

A cornerstone of this effort is One More Stop, a campaign that encourages shoppers to make one additional stop at a local store during their regular outings. Whether it's grabbing a coffee at a local café, picking up a gift from a neighbourhood boutique, or supporting a nearby service provider, this simple act has a powerful impact. It helps sustain local businesses, boosts community connections, and ensures that our shops continue to thrive.

One More Stop also relies on shop owners to actively encourage customers to make that extra visit. Through our visitor information centre, we are fostering this idea with tourists, encouraging them to stay local and make "one more stop" while passing through, highlighting the hidden gems of the Greater Parkland Region.

By making small adjustments to our shopping habits—like adding that "one more stop"—we can all contribute to the success and vitality of the businesses that make our community unique. Together, let's create a vibrant and sustainable local economy, one purchase at a time!

State of the Region

The Tri-Region Expo is more than just a trade show – it's a community celebration where families and local businesses can come together, connect, and enjoy the day.

Tri-Region Expo 2025 coming up on May 10 & 11

The Tri-Region Expo, which runs May 10-11, 2025, is the premier event of the spring season, offering a unique opportunity for both families and businesses to come together for two days of entertainment, networking, and discovery. Whether you're a vendor looking to showcase your products or a browser seeking fun and local services, this event has something for everyone!

FOR VENDORS

This is your chance to connect with a wide audience from the Tri-Region area. The expo provides an excellent platform for you to promote your products or services, increase brand visibility, and engage with potential customers face-to-face. Whether you're a local artisan, service provider, or large retailer, the expo will connect you with an eager and diverse crowd, allowing you to build valuable relationships and increase sales opportunities.

FOR SAVERS

As a visitor, you'll have access to a variety of local businesses, offering everything from unique products to practical services for you and your family. Explore the offerings from local vendors, discover new products, and take advantage of exclusive deals available only at the event.

In addition to browsing, there are fun and interactive activities for the entire family, including a bouncy castle for the kids, face painting, and other entertainment for younger visitors. While the little ones enjoy these activities, parents can relax and explore the many booths showcasing products and services that benefit both their personal and family needs.

The Tri-Region Expo is more than just a trade show – it's a community celebration where families and local businesses can come together, connect, and enjoy the day. Whether you're interested in shopping, networking, or just having a good time with the family, this event offers something for everyone.

Don't miss out on this exciting opportunity to connect, learn, and grow!

Join the GPRC's online auction for exclusive deals and business growth

We are excited to announce the GPRC Online Auction, a special initiative that connects local businesses with the community in a meaningful way. Whether you're a donor looking to promote your business or a bidder eager to discover amazing products and services, this event has something for everyone.

FOR DONORS

This is a unique opportunity for local businesses to gain maximum exposure while supporting a great cause. By donating products, services, or experiences, your business will be featured on a high-visibility platform that attracts a wide audience. Your donation will be showcased through our website, social media, email newsletters, and local radio announcements, ensuring your business is seen by potential customers throughout the region. This exposure helps you build your brand, attract new clients, and strengthen your presence in the community.

Participating in the auction is a strategic opportunity to increase your visibility and drive growth. Whether you're offering a product, service, or exclusive experience, your business will be highlighted among other local businesses, reaching a targeted and engaged audience. Your support not only contributes to a successful event, but also positions your brand in front of consumers who are eager to support local enterprises.

FOR BIDDERS

For bidders, the chamber's online auction offers access to a wide range of unique, high-quality products and experiences from local businesses. Whether you're looking for a special gift, trying out a new service, or bidding on an unforgettable experience, you'll find something for every taste and interest. By participating in the auction, you're not only securing great deals, but also supporting local businesses and contributing to the community's growth.

This is your chance to find exclusive offerings that aren't available anywhere else—plus, every bid helps raise awareness and support for the businesses that make our community vibrant.

Whether you're a donor hoping to increase your brand visibility or a bidder searching for exciting opportunities, the GPRC Online Auction is the perfect way to connect with local businesses, discover great deals, and support our community. Don't miss this exciting opportunity to elevate your business or take home something special.

Anohka Distilleries puts Alberta-grown whisky on world stage

By Shayna Wiwierski

The name "Anohka", derived from Sanskrit, means "weird but wonderful" — a fitting descriptor for a distillery that marries ancient techniques with cutting-edge technology.

In the heart of Parkland County, where golden fields of grain stretch toward the horizon, a small distillery has made a monumental mark on the global stage.

Anohka Distilleries, the brainchild of Gurpreet Ranu, claimed the title of World's Best New Make & Young Spirit for its bold, heavily peated single-malt creation, This is Not Whisky, at the renowned 2024 World Whiskies Awards in London, England. For a distillery that opened its doors just over three years ago in December 2021, this achievement is nothing short of extraordinary—a testament to innovation, perseverance, and an unwavering commitment to quality.

Ranu, a lawyer by trade and now owner of Anohka, didn't set out to become a distiller. Instead, his journey began with a simple observation about the province he calls home.

"What inspired me to start everything was just looking at the amount of grain we grow here in Alberta and realizing we weren't really value-adding to much of it at all," says Ranu. "There's a huge missed opportunity."

That realization sparked a vision: to transform Alberta's abundant harvests into something exceptional—world-class whisky.

Before diving into distilling, Ranu built a career in law, a path that might seem distant from the tactile art of spirit-making. But his legal expertise has been beneficial, helping him steer the business through its complexities. Now, while still serving as Anohka's in-house counsel, he dedicates himself full-time to the distillery, channeling his energy into a deeply personal mission—one that's seen him and his family stake their life savings on its success.

That road to success, however, was far from smooth. A defining challenge came with Anohka's choice to heat its stills with fire, a throwback to whisky-making methods largely abandoned by the 1920s. Most modern distilleries opt for steam, but Ranu was determined to revive this old-school approach. It meant creating custom equipment from scratch, a daunting task that involved adapting a flare stack burner—an oil and gas industry tool—into something fit for whisky. Partnering with a local Alberta company, Ranu's team spent 11 months and endured four redesigns to perfect it.

"There were times we weren't sure it would work," he reflects. "It was a nerve-wracking stretch of trial and error."

That perseverance paid off. The fire-heated stills, combined with a Meura mash filter and a hammer mill for grinding grain, create a process that's as innovative as it is rooted in tradition.

"What we're doing is probably the most traditional way," Ranu explains, noting that the industry largely shifted to steam heating by the 1920s for practical and safety reasons. "I was just on the phone with a distiller in Scotland this week, and he said, 'Oh, you use fire? We did too—until we burnt down the distillery twice.'"

So why stick with fire? For Ranu, it's all about flavour. He likens it to cooking: grilling vegetables or searing a steak yields flavours that steaming can't replicate. The intense heat sparks chemical reactions that enrich the whisky's depth and texture, setting Anohka apart from the pack.

This innovative spirit has earned Anohka more than just the World

Whiskies title. Last year, the distillery also picked up accolades at the GPRC Awards of Distinction, a nod from the Greater Parkland Chamber of Commerce (GPRC) recognizing its excellence and contribution to the region. These local wins, alongside the global honour, highlight Anohka's dual role as a community anchor and an international contender.

"Winning that award is just reflective of the support that we've had in the community since the day we opened. And so, to me, it means a tremendous amount," says Ranu. "The thing about whisky is that it really is a very long-game kind of investment. It takes a significant amount of support from the community to help us keep going."

From neighbours who seed and harvest the barley grown on Anohka's farm to the local oil and gas company that built their custom burner, the distillery's success is deeply tied to its roots.

The World Whiskies Awards, a globally recognized competition, pits emerging distilleries against industry giants from Scotland, Ireland, Japan, and beyond. Ranu entered Anohka's spirit after years of studying the awards' winners and tasting their whiskys.

"Every time I'd try one, I wasn't surprised they'd won—it was fantastic," he says. "I wanted to see how we'd rank against what I believe are truly some of the best whiskys in the world."

To his delight, Anohka didn't just hold its own—it took the top prize.

"Our little distillery in the middle of nowhere in Parkland County beat them all," he says. "That felt pretty good."

Quality is the bedrock of Anohka's success. Ranu's team takes painstaking care at every step, from milling grain to distilling. Their gin, for instance, requires a 14-hour run to yield less than 100 litres—a deliberate pace that preserves its integrity. Speeding up would compromise the flavour, so they don't. That meticulousness has made Anohka's gin Alberta's top-selling over-proof variety, outpacing global brands.

"People can taste the difference," Ranu says. "The sales followed naturally because we refused to settle for less."

That dedication has paid dividends. Anohka's gin is now the best-selling over-proof gin in Alberta, outperforming multinational brands.

To aspiring distillers, Ranu offers hard-earned wisdom: resist the urge to rush. The spirits business demands hefty upfront investment with delayed returns, tempting some to skimp on quality. But he believes that pouring heart and soul into the craft, without shortcuts, is the surest path to success—even if it feels grueling in the moment.

Anohka's momentum shows no signs of slowing. Ranu is excited about a forthcoming blended Canadian whisky, a collaboration with other Alberta distilleries set to launch later this year. Affordable yet exceptional, it's a chance to spotlight the province's whisky prowess on a bigger stage. The GPRC awards last year already hinted at this potential, honouring Anohka's innovation and impact, and now the world is catching on.

The name "Anohka", derived from Sanskrit, means "weird but wonderful"—a fitting descriptor for a distillery that marries ancient techniques with cutting-edge technology.

"Everything we're doing is a little bit weird," Ranu admits. "We're using super old-school traditional methods for distilling while leveraging the most advanced technology available for brewing."

A new diamond rises

Spruce Grove's Energy City Metro Ballpark redefines community and commerce

By Shayna Wiwierski

On the eastern outskirts of Spruce Grove, where Highway 16A meets Pioneer Road, a new landmark is taking shape.

The Energy City Metro Ballpark, set to open in June, is more than a venue for baseball. It's an ambitious experiment in urban synergy, blending sport, commerce, and community in a way that could redefine how smaller cities approach development.

For Patrick Cassidy, managing partner of Spruce Gold Partnership and Gold Sports and Entertainment Group, it's the culmination of a vision that began in 2019, when a faltering lease at a downtown Edmonton ballpark prompted a pivot to this once-raw patch of land.

"There was nothing here previously outside of a couple small acreage sites," says Cassidy, adding that now it's the cornerstone of what he calls a "ballpark district"—a $40 million, privately funded project that pairs a cutting-edge baseball facility with a commercial self-storage business, multifamily housing, restaurants, and plans for an amphitheater. The ballpark itself, dubbed MyShak Field at Energy City Metro Ballpark, will anchor the development, with its 50,000-square-foot footprint and three-level design.

Cassidy's journey to Spruce Grove began when his team's lease at Edmonton's RE/MAX Field started to unravel. Sensing an opportunity, he turned his attention to this bedroom community seven minutes from the Anthony Henday, Edmonton's ring road. The location, he said, was ideal: accessible yet distinct, a place where a ballpark could thrive as both a local hub and a regional draw.

Construction on the ballpark and self-storage began in 2023, but prior to that, weather delays, the sets the project apart.

"It's almost like two businesses operating in the same space," he says.

This multi-purpose approach underscores the broader ambition: to create a synergistic centre for social gathering. Beyond the ballpark, Phase 1 includes multifamily residential units and highway commercial spaces, with a restaurant and amphitheater slated for later phases. The goal, Cassidy explains, is to weave the facility into the fabric of Spruce Grove, a city of 38,000 that has led the region in housing starts as families flock to its amenities.

"We're trying to bring the community into the ballpark as much as possible," he says, envisioning spaces that appeal to families, singles, and corporate groups alike.

The project's name—Energy City Metro Ballpark—hints at its branding aspirations. The resident team, the Energy City Cactus Rats, will compete in the Western Canadian Baseball League, and Cassidy sees "Energy City" as a marketable identity for the region. MyShak, a major sponsor, lends its name to the field, with more naming announcements expected soon. It's Migratory Bird Act, and lingering logistical issues from the COVID-19 pandemic slowed the site servicing and land development by as much as 18 months. Now, with a June 2025 opening in sight, the project is poised to deliver what Cassidy calls "one of Canada's next great baseball experiences".

The ballpark's design reflects a modern ethos, prioritizing variety and engagement. A wide promenade serves as the central artery, feeding into a seating bowl with options ranging from low-slung seats to patios, club areas, and suites.

"People like to enjoy their sports facilities nowadays," Cassidy says.

Digital enhancements—a 24-by-40-foot scoreboard, a ribbon board, and smaller concourse screens—nod to the revenue streams that sustain contemporary venues. Yet, the most striking feature may be the integration of a commercial self-storage facility beneath the main concourse, a pragmatic marriage of infrastructure that Cassidy believes a calculated play to elevate Spruce Grove's profile, drawing fans from Parkland County, Stony Plain, and the greater Edmonton metro area.

Economically, the ballpark promises a ripple effect. Cassidy anticipates it will host not just baseball but concerts, markets, and other events, generating activity that spills into local businesses.

"People coming to town in the summertime, looking for something to do—they'll find a baseball game, spend money here, and then spend more elsewhere," he says. Studies on similar projects suggest millions in annual economic impact, a boon for a region already on the rise.

Challenges have been plentiful. The Migratory Bird Act of 1918 halted clearing for a summer, as nesting birds took precedence. Weather, supply chain snags, and escalating costs tested the team's resolve. Yet Cassidy credits a coalition of local talent—TBD Architecture and Prism Engineering, among others—with keeping the project on track. Spruce Grove's permitting process, he added, has been a rare bright spot. "They've been pretty good to deal with," he says.

As cranes hum and the grandstands rise, anticipation is building. Season ticket sales are robust, corporate sponsorships are locked in, and the community buzz is palpable. For Cassidy, it's validation of a gamble that began with a sidelined lease and a patch of empty land.

"It's not very often a new ballpark of this nature comes along," he says. "I think it's exciting."

From humble beginnings to thriving communities: Qualico's legacy in Stony Plain and Spruce Grove

Above: With over 20 communities currently under development in the Edmonton area (five of which are in the Greater Parkland region) homebuyers have an abundance of choice when it comes to putting down their own roots.

Picture this: it's the early 1950's. Canada is just experiencing colour television, Elizabeth II is being crowned Queen, and a visionary company, Qualico, is taking its first steps as a new home builder.

Fast forward to today and you'll find that Qualico has grown from its humble beginnings into one of the largest fully integrated, privately owned real estate companies in Western Canada. And part of that growth has been rooted in master-planned residential developments led by its Communities division.

With over 20 communities currently under development in the Edmonton area (five of which are in the Greater Parkland region) homebuyers have an abundance of choice when it comes to putting down their own roots.

STONY PLAIN

In Stony Plain, homebuyers can choose from three established communities: Westerra, Silverstone, and SouthCreek. While each community has its own individual personality, a common thread runs through them all: outdoor spaces like parks and trails that are designed to connect the community.

"Where you live is not just about your home, but the community that surrounds it," says Caitlin Congdon, marketing coordinator for Qualico Communities. "In each of our communities we put emphasis on outdoor spaces that enhance the quality of life for our residents. Parks, playgrounds, and common areas bring people together."

In each of their communities, Qualico puts emphasis on outdoor spaces that enhance the quality of life for their residents.

Westerra has been a family-favourite for just that, having multiple playgrounds, parks, and an outdoor rink that hosts games of shiny in the winter and pick-up basketball in the summer. SouthCreek has new lots that back onto a landscaped storm pond and Silverstone is bordered by park space and an environmental reserve.

"Young families love the small-town feel of Stony Plain, its artistic downtown, and the easy commuter access," says Congdon. "It's the perfect blend of charm and convenience, and with a new recreation centre under construction, there will be even more to love."

For those commuting to Edmonton, Easton provides easy access to the highway, along with a large, landscaped storm pond, a playground, environmental reserve, and ample future park space.

SPRUCE GROVE

Two Spruce Grove communities offer opportunities to build a new home near exciting new amenities. Springgate, with less than 20 lots remaining, has been a popular choice due to its close proximity to the TransAlta Tri Leisure Centre, Rotary Playscape, Fuhr Sports Park, and modern schools.

For those commuting to Edmonton, Easton provides easy access to the highway, along with a large, landscaped storm pond, a playground, environmental reserve, and ample future park space. Homebuyers have particularly enjoyed the option of three-storey townhomes in Easton.

"It's a great price point for new buyers looking to get into the market," says Congdon. "Especially if you're a young working professional and want quick access to the big city, Easton is perfectly situated."

It's also near the future Myshak Metro Ballpark and Heavy Metal Place.

"There won't be any shortage of entertainment options with these amenities close by!" adds Congdon.

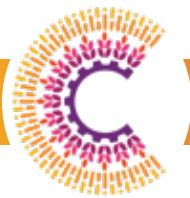

LOTS TO LOVE

Qualico Communities continues to invest in the Greater Parkland region and its vision of helping to build better cities is brought to life through its master planned communities.

As development continues, Qualico Communities is looking forward to bringing additional product types to the market to enhance choice and affordability options for residents.

"We're excited to continue to grow in the Tri-Region. Our builder partners are continually offering innovative and desirable housing options, and we love to see diverse communities grow along with the cities and towns they're a part of."
